

Institute Schedule

FRIDAY, JULY 25

7:00 p.m. Gregory Maguire

SATURDAY, JULY 26

8:30 a.m. Coffee, Registration, and Opening Remarks

9:30 a.m. Lauren Rizzuto

10:30 a.m. Rotem Moscovich and Doug Salati

11:30 a.m. Seminars & Lunch

1:00 p.m. Breanna McDaniel and Vashti Harrison

2:00 p.m. Ellen Keiter and Paul O. Zelinsky

3:00 p.m. Book Signings

4:00 p.m. Beatriz Gutiérrez Hernández

5:30 p.m. Mary Nagel Sweetser Lecture and Reception:
Christopher Myers

SUNDAY, JULY 27

9:00 a.m. Coffee

9:30 a.m. Cynthia Leitich Smith

10:30 a.m. Adib Khorram

11:30 a.m. Book Signings

12:00 noon Seminars and Lunch

1:30 p.m. Lisa Yee

2:30 p.m. Neal Porter in conversation with Sydney Smith

3:30 p.m. Closing Comments

4:00 p.m. Book Signings and Farewell

Schedule subject to change.

IN GRATITUDE

Many thanks to Melissa Sweet for permission to use her art from How to Read a Book (Kwame Alexander, HarperCollins 2019), to interpret the Institute theme. Art copyright © Melissa Sweet.

We also extend our gratitude to Marie-Louise Fitzpatrick for allowing us to use her words from There (Roaring Brook Press 2009). Text copyright © Marie-Louise Fitzpatrick.

We recognize Barbara Harrison, visionary founder of the Center for the Study of Children’s Literature, who pioneered the rigorous academic engagement in literature for young people that defines us today.

Event Registration

simmons.edu/go/summer-institute-2025

Art copyright © Melissa Sweet

Center for the Study of Children’s Literature
The Gwen Ifill School of Media, Humanities, and Social Sciences
300 The Fenway, Boston, Massachusetts 02115

Shelley Isaacson, Coordinator, Summer Children’s Literature Institute
Cathryn M. Mercier, Director, Center for the Study of Children’s Literature

chl@simmons.edu
simmons.edu/cscl

Are We There Yet?

An Institute: July 25-27, 2025

Simmons
UNIVERSITY

Center for the Study of Children’s Literature

*And will I know everything, There?
Will I know all the secrets?
Will I know how to count the stars
and how to fix the broken things?*

–Marie-Louise Fitzpatrick
There

As we celebrate the 50th birthday of the Center for the Study of Children’s Literature, Are We There Yet? summons us to reflect on the founding of the Center and the inauguration of the academic study of literature for young people.

Are We There Yet? fires the imagination with the promise of somewhere. Maybe we arrive at a place, finish a project, discover something new, or see things differently. The theme challenges us to lose and find ourselves as we make way for the future and chase (im)possible dreams. Are We There Yet? makes us chuckle in familiarity with our own jiggling impatience for coming home. Authors and illustrators invite us into the pages of a book and beckon us to stay there for a while. As we pause to read or take time to gather together, we find nourishment and renewal.

We’ll speculate on whether we have realized our founding vision. How close have we come? How far do we have to go? How do we get there?

Mary Nagel Sweetser Lecture

Christopher Myers will deliver the 2025 Mary Nagel Sweetser Lecture for Are We There Yet? Myers debuted with illustrations for The Shadow of the Red Moon (Walter Dean Myers, 1995) and has been pushing boundaries ever since. He earned a Caldecott Honor for Harlem (Walter Dean Myers, 1997) and the Coretta Scott King Award for Firebird (Misty Copeland, 2014).

His tapestries, stained glass paintings, and sculptures share visions of migration, globalization, and colonization. His work has been exhibited in the MoMa PS1, the Studio Museum in Harlem, and the Goethe Institute in Ghana. Regardless of medium, format, or audience, Myers invites viewers to pause to confront difficult truths and revel in joyful moments.

In two pivotal essays, “Young Dreamers” (The Horn Book, 2013) and “The Apartheid of Children’s Literature” (The New York Times, 2014), he asserts that we are not nearly there yet. As Creative Director for the Make Me a World imprint, he insists that “no young person is invisible, no kid’s story is erased, and no glass ceiling presses down on the dreams of a child.”

Institute Speakers

Vashti Harrison, author and illustrator of the Little Leaders and Little Dreamers series, heralds famous and lesser-known women who shaped Black history. The first Black woman to win the Caldecott Medal, Harrison claims her own place in history with Big (2023) whose varied, calibrated book design, sharp use of font as a picture element, and commanding gatefold affirms the beauty and selfhood of a young, big Black girl.

In the Ezra Jack Keats Honor book Benito Juárez Fights for Justice (2023) and Desert Song (Laekan Zea Kemp, 2024), Beatriz Gutiérrez Hernández immerses readers in detail-rich settings that depict the interconnectedness of characters—human and animal, living and ancestral—and their natural and built environments.

For almost a decade, Ellen Keiter served as the Chief Curator at the Eric Carle Museum of Picture Book Art. Ellen’s exhibitions forged meaningful connections between visitors of all ages and original picturebook art.

In Adib Khorram’s debut novel Darius the Great is Not Okay (2018), Iranian, white, queer depressed Darius embarks on his first trip to Iran, a journey of familial and self-discovery. The novel won the William C. Morris YA Debut Award, the Asian/Pacific American Young Adult Literature Award, and Boston Globe-Horn Book recognition. Khorram writes across age groups and formats and recently published his first novel for adults, I’ll Have What He’s Having (2024).

Long before he arrived with the smash novel Wicked (1995), Gregory Maguire participated in one of the first summer institutes, was the first graduate of the Simmons MA in Children’s Literature, and served as a faculty member and Associate Director of the program. A consummate revisionist and storyteller, he reinvigorates the genre of the animal fantasy in Cress Watercress (2022).

Breanna J. McDaniel’s picturebooks honor quotidian and exceptional Black lives. Hands Up! (Shane Evans, 2019) reclaims the everyday act of raising one’s hands. Ezra Jack Keats Award book Go Forth and Tell celebrates The Life of Augusta Baker, Librarian and Master Storyteller (April Harrison, 2024). McDaniel is a co-founder of Researchers Exploring Inclusive Youth Literature (REIYL).

Rotem Moscovich, Editorial Director of Picturebooks at Alfred A. Knopf Books for Young Readers, champions notable picturebook creators. She guided books by Are We There Yet? speakers including Hot Dog (2023) by Doug Salati and My Pen (2015) by Christopher Myers.

Now the Publisher Emeritus of his own imprint, Neal Porter’s mentors included legendary publishers Ursula Nordstrom and Margaret McElderry. In turn, Neal has mentored myriad creators, including Caldecott Honoree Yuyi Morales and Medalist Erin Stead, Sibert Medalists Candace Fleming and Eric Rohmann, and Sydney Smith (see below). Above all, Neal’s work has pushed the boundaries and potential of the picturebook form for narrative storytelling across genres.

Lauren Rizzuto returns to Simmons as the 2025 Carol S. Kline Visiting Instructor to teach the graduate course that culminates in this year’s Institute. She currently serves as the Department Chair of English at the Willow School in New Orleans. Her scholarship and teaching interrogate representations of climate change and environmental justice in literature for young people.

In a quintessential, Are We There Yet? moment, Doug Salati’s Caldecott-winning Hot Dog (2023) stretches out the journey for a dachshund and their human as they escape from a claustrophobic city to their breezy, beach retreat. Salati’s spare, lyrical text emphasizes the emotional connection between the canine-human duo and reminds readers that who you get “there” with matters.

Cynthia Leitich Smith (Muscogee Nation) earned a law degree on her path to becoming an award-winning author of books for young people that center Indigenous lives. Smith publishes the digital newsletter Cynsations, curates the Heartdrum imprint, and is the 2025 ALSC Children’s Literature Lecturer Award Winner. Recent publications include On a Wing and a Tear (2024) and the Blue Stars graphic novel series (with Kekkla Magoon, illustrated by Molly Murakami).

Sydney Smith’s picturebooks trust readers to grapple with complex emotions, such as feeling small and lost in a big city, anxious waiting for a parent to return, or struggling to embrace a stutter. His careful pacing of words and images assures that no matter the challenge, we will always get there. He holds the current 2024 Hans Christian Andersen Medal and has been recognized with two Kate Greenaway Medals, the Governor General’s Award, and two Boston Globe Horn Book Awards (I Talk Like a River, 2021; Do You Remember, 2024).

Lisa Yee began 2025 crisscrossing the country talking with children about the second book in The Misfits series, A Copycat Conundrum (illustrated by Dan Santat, 2025). A versatile author, Yee’s sense of humor shines through in stories about quirky, complicated characters. Recognized as a National Book Award Finalist, Maizy Chen’s Last Chance (2023) received a Newbery Honor and the Asian/Pacific American Children’s Literature Award.

Paul O. Zelinsky defies a single approach as he moves from the stylized work of The Maid and the Mouse and the Odd Shaped House (1981), to the Italian Renaissance elegance of the Caldecott-winning Rapunzel (1977), to the zany watercolor and inkjet art for Z is for Moose (Kelly Bingham, 2013). In Still Life (Alex London, 2024), Zelinsky blends digital and traditional techniques to grant agency, humor, and motion to a still life painting with an existential crisis.