Dissertation

- The Experience of Having Become Sexually Active for Teenage Mothers (Burns, 2003), a qualitative, descriptive phenomenological study which had as its focus the lived experience of initiating sexual activity for a group of 10 adolescent mothers, as well as the context of that experience. Project was undertaken to illuminate the structures of the experience and the contextual features of having become sexually active for these young women in order to promote understanding and foster meaningful efforts toward prevention and intervention with this population. Published by University of Missouri Press, May, 2003.
